THE MAY FOURTH MOVEMENT

Intellectual Revolution in Modern China

Chow Tse-tsung

Originally published in the Harvard East Asian Series

STANFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
Stanford, California
CONTENTS

1 Introduction
   Definition of the Movement 1
   Economic, Social, and Political Background 6
   Significance of the Movement in Historical Perspective 11

PART ONE
DEVELOPMENT OF THE MOVEMENT

II Forces that Precipitated the Movement, 1915–1918 19
   Humiliation of Patriots at Home (Impact of the Twenty-one Demands) 19
   Reforming Zeal of Students Abroad 25

III The Initial Phase of the Movement: Early Literary and Intellectual Activities, 1917–1919 41
   Establishment of New Youth Magazine 42
   Reforms at Peking University 48
   The Alliance of the New Intellectuals and the Establishment of
   New Tide Magazine 51
   Reform Views of the New Intellectuals 58
   The Opposition's Argument and the Rejoinder 61
   Response of the Youth to the New Ferment 73
   The Anti-Japanese Petition of May 1918 77

IV The May Fourth Incident 84
   China's Failure at the Versailles Peace Conference 84
   Chinese Public Sentiment in Respect to the Peace Treaty 89
   Disillusioning News from Paris 92
   The Students: Their Character and Organization 94
   The May Fourth Demonstration 99
   From the Legation Quarter to Ts'ao Jü-lin's House 109

V Developments Following the Incident: Student
   Demonstrations and Strikes 117
   Immediate Reaction of the Government 118
   Establishment of the Peking Student Union and Mobilization
   of the Intellectuals 120
   Student Support from Other Cities 129
   The President's Disciplinary Mandates and Ts'ai Yüan-p'ei's Departure 132
   The Students' General Strike 139
CONTENTS

V I Further Developments: Support from Merchants, Industrialists, and Workers 145
The Government's Failure to Secure a Compromise from the Students 145
Mass Arrests of June 2, 3, and 4 148
The June Fifth Merchants' and Workers' Strikes in Shanghai 151
Settlement of the May Fourth Incident: Fall of the Cabinet and Refusal to Sign the Peace Treaty 158
Attempts to Split the Students after the Settlement 167
Some Questions Regarding the Settlement 168

V II Expansion of the New Culture Movement, 1919–1920 171
Increasing Unity among the New Intellectuals 171
Invigorated Programs of New Youth and New Tide 174
Rapid Increase of New Publications and Revamping of Old 176
The Rising Tide of Iconoclasm 182
New Intellectual, Social, and Political Organizations 187
Public Education Sponsored by the New Intellectuals 191
Increasing Support for the New Culture Movement 194

V III Foreign Attitudes Toward the Movement 197
The Japanese Reaction 197
Two Contrasting Western Attitudes: Sympathy and Suspicion 201
The Soviet Appeal 209

IX The Ideological and Political Split, 1919–1921 215
Major Intellectual Groups Involved in the Split "Problems and 'isms" 215
Sociopolitical Activism versus Cultural Activism 218
Democracy, Capitalism, Socialism, and Westernization 222
Participation in Politics 238

X Sociopolitical Consequences, 1920–1922 254
Reorientation of Political and Economic Organizations 254
The Emancipation of Women 257
Reforms in Education 259
Later Trends in the Student Movement 262

PART TWO
ANALYSIS OF MAIN INTELLECTUAL CURRENTS

XI The Literary Revolution 269
The Old Literature 269
Advocacy of Realism and the Vernacular in Literary Writing 271
Opposition to the Literary Reform 279
CONTENTS

Humanitarianism, Naturalism, and Romanticism: The Society for Literary Studies and the Creation Society
From Literary Revolution to Revolutionary Literature

XII The New Thought and Re-evaluation of the Tradition

The Hard Core of the Old Thought
New Thoughts: Realism, Utilitarianism, Liberalism, Individualism, Socialism, and Darwinism
New Methods: Pragmatic, Skeptical, and Agnostic Approaches and the "Down with Confucius and Sons"

XIII The New Thought and Later Controversies

Doubts on Antiquity
Re-evaluation and Reorganization of the National Heritage
The Antireligious Movement
The Controversy over Eastern and Western Civilizations
The Polemic on Science and Metaphysics

XIV Conclusion: Various Interpretations and Evaluations

A Renaissance, Reformation, or Enlightenment — The Liberals' Views
A Catastrophe to China — Criticisms by the Conservative Nationalists and Traditionalists
An Anti-Imperialist and Antifeudal Movement Called Forth by Lenin — The Communist Interpretation
Who Led the Movement?
The Real Nature of the Movement — A Suggested Interpretation
Achievements and Shortcomings Reappraised
Some Further Considerations

A Chronology of Relevant Events, 1914–1923

Appendices

A. A Brief Analysis of the Social Forces in the May Fourth Period
B. The Number of Schools and Students Involved in the May Fourth Incident
C. Universities and Colleges Involved in the May Fourth Incident
D. Data on Workers' Strikes in China, 1918–1926

Notes

Index